Public Assistance Administrative Costs
per Casemonth, Fiscal Year 1965

100%

Note: Costs per casemonth for medical assistance for the aged and for general assistance are not shown. The reasons are as follows:

MAA: For MAA, the data lack interprogram and interstate comparability, because some States are still in the first stages of administering a program for medical assistance for the aged. The administrative costs involved in initiating a medical assistance for the aged program are high in relation to the number of bills paid. Moreover, variations in procedures for paying for medical care affect interstate comparability of the caseload size to which administrative costs would be related. The bills incurred during a month for a case may be paid over a period of several months in one State but in a single month in another State. As a result, other things being equal, costs per casemonth in any given period would be lower in the State that paid bills over a period of months than in the State that paid all bills for a specific case in a single month. If the effect of the different payment procedures on size of caseload were eliminated, two States might be found to be spending about the same monthly amount per case for administration.

GA: For many States data either are not available or are incomplete. Reported data also lack comparability.
